The Fusion Group

Case Study The Fusion Group

The Fusion Group is a £100 million multinational that supports gas, water and electricity infrastructure markets worldwide. We started using CCS Media in 2004. Initially as print and toner suppliers but over the years we have increased the range of products and services we use them for.

In 2011, after collaborating for 6 years, we approached CCS Media to support a server refresh and develop our new SAN environment. Our dedicated CCS Media account manager already had a great understanding of our business so it was easy for him to bring his IT Project Services team up to speed.

The process began with a workshop that examined our business, our current infrastructure and where we needed to get to. We then reviewed the current technology on offer from multiple manufacturers.

Within several "whiteboard workshops" we discussed the benefits of multiple manufacturer technology. These collaborative sessions culminated in the creation of a multibrand solution that would be built on Dell Servers and HP Lefthand storage. This multi manufacturer solution was the only way we could achieve exactly what we wanted.

The Project Services team built the proposal and then worked with me throughout the implementation process. As a result of the workshop we also evolved a separate project: reviewing our printer estate and options around managed print.

Our Account Manager brought in the Printer Specialist team. They quickly demystified print solutions and managed print and began looking at them in terms of our business and workflow.

After working together for so long on multiple levels of our business, CCS Media have become more than just an IT supplier. They are one of our business partners, this shows in the expertise of their account manager and the level of understanding he has of our business.

From managed print to servers
and storage,
CCS Media
supply The Fusion Group with a total solution.

"They are now
our 'go to'
